Krishnamurti on a Artificial Intelligence

The computer is artificial intelligence; it can learn, correct itself, write, compose music, and so on. So the computer, the machine invented by man, is changing society. It is changing the structure of outward human existence. Whether you know about it or not is perhaps of very little importance, but it is taking place; it is happening. If the machine can do everything thought can do – invent gurus, rituals, gods, write poems, beat a grand master in chess – what then is man? This is an important question you have to ask. I don't think many of us realise what a dangerous state we are in.

New Book: The Prison of Tradition

Krishnamurti's use of the word tradition goes beyond its usual association with religion and orthodoxy. In this new book, he poses a challenge to all those who use tradition to establish an identity for themselves either in the spiritual world or in the material world.
